GERMAN SOCIALISTS CULTIVATING RUSSIA

(By Associated Press.)

COPENHAGEN, April 10.—In the midst of the interest in America's own preparations for participation in the war and impending German and allied offensive in the west, it would be wise not to lose sight of the fact that the Germans, particularly the Socialists, are working industriously toward peace with Russia and have not lost hope of success, despite the discouraging pronouncements of a war to a victorious end coming from Petrograd.

It is announced in Berlin that the Socialist leader, Philipp Scheidemann, head of the majority Socialists in the reichstag and a politician close to the chancellor, has left Germany on "a mission." The nature of this mission is not specified, but there is reason to assume that as a well-known Russo-German Socialist, who is known by the pen name of Parvus, who also came abroad just after the conference of the majority Socialists, which was called to consider the possibilities of the Russian situation, Herr Scheidemann's mission involves an attempt to open communication with the Russian Socialists and social revolutionists of the extreme school who favor an immediate peace.

It is said the German government has given its support to the endeavors by an issuance that no general offensive on the Russian front will be taken for the time being in order not to interfere with attempts at fraternizing, the army leaders probably considering that the recent dive against the Stokk bridgehead had only a local bearing.

The Socialist effort is said to be in line with directions given out before the convocation of the historic session of the American Congress, namely to try first for a general peace and then if that effort again proved a failure, owing to the attitude of the western powers to concentrate efforts on a separate peace with Russia.

Overtures were about to be made to the United States to undertake mediation on favorable terms when President Wilson's sharp message and the unresponsive attitude of the western powers to the peace discussions of Count Czernin, the Austro-Hungarian foreign minister says the Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung showed the futility of the effort. Now the Vorwaerts, in line with original decisions pledged in a recent leading editorial article, the most vigorous patriotic support of the Socialists to the government in the struggle with the United States.

DOUBLE TRAGEDY IN THE HOME OF A GERMAN NAVAL CHIEF

(By Associated Press.)

TOKIO, April 10.—Japanese authorities assert that there is no evidence that the recent murder of Mrs. Irma von Saldern, daughter of Vice Admiral Eduard von Capelle, the German minister of the navy, was an act of vengeance upon the German naval chief, and that the murder was committed undoubtedly by a Japanese burglar. The fact that the crime occurred at a time when Germany's unrestricted submarine warfare was holding world interest, the authorities declare, was merely a coincidence. Nevertheless, the tragedy is widely discussed in diplomatic circles.

Irma von Saldern was a beautiful woman of 28 years who passed her time in seclusion near the German prisoners' camp at Fukuoka, the southernmost island of Kyushu. Her husband, Captain Siegfried von Saldern, was one of the most prominent German officers taken prisoner by the Japanese at the surrender of the German fortress of Tsing-tau. Von Saldern was a member of a well-known German family, with a seat at Dessau and his marriage with the daughter of the German minister was a happy one. In China, Captain von Saldern was an intimate friend of Governor von Waldeck, the commander of Tsing-tau fortress. After the capitulation, Mrs. von Saldern, with her two children, followed her husband to Japan and rented a fashionable Japanese house near the compound in which her husband was an officer prisoner. There she lived quietly, rarely leaving her children, except to visit her husband and some of his officer friends during their illness. A few weeks ago she suggested that she leave Japan with one of her boys, to further his education and try to return to Germany. Her husband urged her to remain. She consented.

One morning, when a domestic entered, she found her mistress stretched upon the floor of a bedroom, lifeless. An electric cord wound tightly about her neck showed that she had been strangled to death. The police reconstructed the crime in this way: The assassin entered armed with a poignard or short sword and stabbed her. When she became unconscious or helpless, he cut the electric wire or cord which connected the lamp with a wall fixture and, making a noose, choked the woman to death. There were evidences that burglary was committed.

The next act of the tragedy came three days later, 24 hours after the funeral of Mrs. von Saldern. Captain von Saldern was inconsolable. The fact that he had urged his wife to remain preyed upon his mind and, apparently he did not forgive himself. About the hour of his wife's murder he detached from the wall of his house an electric cord similar to that with which she was strangled, fixed it to the chandelier in his salon and committed suicide by hanging.

The press maintains silence concerning the tragedy. The police are making every effort to discover the murderer.

UNTRAINED LEVIES NO USE IN EUROPE

(By Associated Press.)

LONDON, April 10.—The Times military correspondent says: "If the United States cares to send a regiment or two to London, or Rome, to affirm the solidarity of the allied cause, it will be a graceful act, but we shall not misunderstand it if we have to wait some months until the first division appears. Hastily formed, untrained levies are useless."

NO MIDDLEMEN

Canned goods, bottled goods, flour, prepared foods, etc., are sold and shipped to jobbers, unloaded and warehoused for a while, then sold to wholesalers, reloaded, shipped and unloaded in the wholesale establishment, sold and shipped again to retailers. Loading, unloading, handling, warehousing, insurance, cost of doing business, profits of middlemen, salaries of traveling salesmen, and their expenses, are all added to THE PRICE YOU PAY, unless the retail groceryman takes the trouble to BUY DIRECT FROM THE PRODUCER, and thus eliminate all the middlemen's profits and the expense of shipping and reshipping. We do not wait for traveling men and agents. We buy everything that we can direct from the producers. We are the last link in the chain of distributors, and we are held up by high prices unless we can eliminate the middlemen. That is what we are trying to do. We serve you as direct as we can, and the big increase in our business shows that the people appreciate it. We sell first quality goods for about the same figure that "seconds" bring through the long chain of middlemen. We have had to employ another clerk on account of our increased business.
